Emotions Anonymous is an international fellowship of men and women who meet to share their experience, strength and hope to resolve their emotional problems.

EA is not affiliated with any sect, religion, political party, organization or institution, it does not get involved in any controversies nor does it take positions or oppose any given cause.

There are no fees to be paid to be a member of EA. We maintain our financial self-sufficiency through voluntary contributions on the part of members. During our meetings we use the program first created by Alcoholics Anonymous to learn a new way to live in a satisfying way.

In our groups we can say whatever we feel, knowing that their confidences will be kept confidential. We respect members' anonymity and we do not ask questions.

We do not judge, we do not get involved in discussions or give advice.

Everyone has their own opinion and is free to express it during the meeting.

We are “experts” only regarding our own personal experiences and the way in which we benefit from applying the program and from support we receive from EA.

In EA we avoid discussions about religion: this is a spiritual program but it is not based on any particular form of religion; all are welcome.

In EA we avoid gossiping; we meet to help ourselves and others recover our emotional health. Carelessness in repeating what was said in a meeting obstacles trust and growth of the program.
